

Dr. Kelly Graves is a clinical psychologist in NC and spent almost 16 years in academia in the UNC system. As a retired tenured Associate Professor, Dr. Graves felt the call to move from the classroom to the community. So, she founded Kellin, PLLC, and its non-profit partner the Kellin Foundation, which has now been recognized nationally and a partner with the National Child Traumatic Stress Network (NCTSN). She is sought after as a trainer and technical assistance provider across the United States and the globe in the areas of trauma and resilience, assisting in Guam, Japan, Hawaii, and several other countries and states. She was invited to the White House to participate in Think Tank sessions on building community safety and resiliency and is a consultant with the Office for Victims of Crime, OVC Training and Technical Assistance Center (OVC TTAC) with the United States Department of Justice as well as the University of North Carolina - Chapel Hill AHEC Training Partnership program. She serves on multiple boards and workgroups, including the NC Institute of Medicine Editorial Board and the NC ACES-Informed Task Force formed by Chief Justice Paul Newby. She is an accomplished scholar with dozens of peer-reviewed publications, books, and book chapters, and has extensive experience providing direct clinical services as well, which provides a unique perspective in her trainings and workshops. She has received numerous awards, including the American Psychological Association Division 56 Trauma award, named as a Top Psychologist with the International Association of Health Care Professionals, and most recently, a Coin of Excellence for her service and support for military and veteran families.
