

Suzanne Stafford was born and raised in the small town of Louisburg, North Carolina. She has worked in the communications field since 2014, and began working for her own company in 2016. She joined the team at Mental Health Greensboro as Communications Director in 2019 and enjoys the combination of writing, graphic design, community outreach and leadership that the work entails. Working in the non-profit mental health field is close to her heart as she realizes that everyone struggles from time to time, and having accessible mental health treatment is a luxury not all are able to afford. Suzanne is the mother of two daughters, and in her free time enjoys playing guitar, writing and performing live music.
